

The Leadership Education in Neurodevelopmental and Related Disabilities (LEND) network is a federally supported program designed to improve health outcomes for individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and other neurodevelopmental conditions.

The Brooklyn LEND program was established in collaboration between SUNY Downstate School of Health Professions and the Department of Pediatrics, with the goals of enhancing ASD services across the lifespan.

We offer free in-person or online workshops on many topics related to neurodevelopmental conditions. Workshops can be tailored to the specific needs or interests of your community or organization.

- * Recognizing early signs of developmental delays
- * Early signs of autism & the next steps
- * NYC school settings & services
- * Addressing learning, behavioral & sensory challenges
- * Treatment, resources & services across the lifespan
- * Mental health aspects & neurodiversity
- * Autism & IDD for first responders
