The most common symptom of colorectal cancer is no symptom at all.
Know your risk factors and get screened, especially if you're over 50.

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY SCREENING GUIDELINES

People who have no risk factors (other than age) should begin regular screenings at age 50 and have a colonoscopy every 10 years thereafter.

People who have a family history or other risk factors for colon or rectal cancer should begin their screening program at a younger age and have the tests done more frequently.
